Small Businesses, Sen. Sam Graves combine forces, tackle economic issues

SUSAN PORTERFIELD
ASSISTANT CITY NEWS EDITOR

Sen. Sam Graves, R-Mo., and Northwest's Small Business Development Center urged the Northwest Conference of County Commissioners to appoint entrepreneurs in their area to a regional advisory board for Northwest's Small Business Development Center in Platte City Thursday.

Graves and the SBDC hope the bi-yearly advisory board will be a varied group of businessmen who will bring attention to issues such as infrastructures, interactive television and fiber optics.

The board will not set policy, but Graves and the SBDC hope the advisers will direct policy. Meetings for the board are set in April and October, and the first meeting, located at Northwest, will be a group education meeting.

Hoping that the advisory board will provide new insight concerning improvement of the economic environment, Graves supports the SBDC in its effort to promote small businesses.

"If you can get 50 small businesses started, it's better than one large business," Graves said.

Commenting on the increase of businesses in northwest Missouri, Graves praised the area for its effort.

"I want to brag on northwest Missouri," he said. "This area is well on its way to developing tremendous economic growth."

Brad Anderson, director of SBDC, said the organization, currently sponsored by Northwest, serves seven counties and 600 clients. Anderson hopes the group will provide an outreach program for new businesses.

"This is going to give us inside information for needs (the businesses) will want us to fulfill in the future," Anderson said.

Larry Dougan, South District commissioner in Nodaway County, said there has been no final decision made yet on who would be appointed to the board from this area.

"We discussed it, and we plan to go ahead and appoint someone," Dougan said. "Some names have been mentioned, but no concrete decisions have been made."

Dougan expressed his support of the advisory board and said the area could see benefits from it.

"I think it will work fine," Dougan said. "It will bring a lot of ideas from others together, and if we can pick the right person to represent the county, it will work well."

Spirit and enthusiasm gushed throughout Maryville High School as the Spoofhounds take part in annual Fall Homecoming festivities.

All 'Hounds supporters are welcomed to a public pep rally and bonfire, sponsored by the Booster Athletic Club. The event will take place at 8:30 p.m. at the west parking lot at MHS.

The 'Hounds are set to play the Lafayette High School Fightin' Irish for the Homecoming game Friday. This year's theme is "Their luck stops here."

Each day of the week has its own spirit theme to give all students the opportunity to dress up in various costumes. Each day the class with the most students dressed up is awarded ten points toward the overall class competition.

Monday, students simply rolled out of bed and headed for school on "Bedhead Day." Everyone sported their favorite hunting attire for "Camouflage Day" on Tuesday. "Cowboy and Indian Day" was Wednesday and today students explored their opposite sides for "Dress like your Date Day." Friday is the traditional "Green, White and Gold Day."

"Some people you would never expect to get involved do," senior Shelly Kinder said. "It's great!"

Classes also compete by decorating specific sections of the football stadium. The first and second place classes receive 25 and 10 points, respectively. Seniors decorate the bleachers, juniors decorate the area on the east side of the multipurpose building, sophomores decorate the concession stand area and freshmen decorate the parking lot.

"The sight of the stadium gets the whole school in the mood to cheer the 'Hounds on,'" junior Bryan Nigh said.

Wednesday the female students of MHS took charge of the football field for the Powder Puff football game. The girls battled each other in a flag football competition.

Motorcyclists head for highway

Local organizations show pride in membership, welcome other riders

A black leather jacket, tough looks and a rough attitude may comprise the picture many people see when they think of bikers, but for two local motorcycling organizations, Freedom of Road Riders and 102 Valley Road Riders, members do not necessarily fit the stereotype.

Linda Pitzenberger, president of FOR, said the local organization, started in 1981, currently has 91 members. Pitzenberger said it was formed to help protect motorcycle riders' rights.

"We're out there to make sure we can stay on the road," Pitzenberger said. "We also bring in state instructors to teach riding. We're into motorcycle safety."

Pitzenberger said the students come from places like Kansas City and Warrensburg as well as Maryville.

"(The instructors) bring up motorcycles for beginners and teach them the right way to ride in a two-day course," she said. "We also hold an advanced one-day course for those who already ride that want to brush up or that have picked up bad habits."

State updates partnership

CHERA PRIDEAUX

A newly formed partnership between the Missouri Farm Bureau and the State Emergency Management Agency will benefit all Missouri citizens in an emergency situation.

The partnership will provide another means of communication in the event of a major disaster, such as a tornado, flood or earthquake.

Disaster Satellite Communications is the partnership that was announced by Gov. Mel Carnahan at a news conference last week.

In the event of a disaster, when systems such as telephones, cellular lines and radio frequencies are not working, local officials or an emergency director may go to the local County Farm Bureau office to send and receive information from the State Emergency Operations Center via satellite.

SEMA spokesperson Susie Stonner said the idea was brought up and SEMA went to the Farm Bureau and worked out an agreement.

"This is the first agreement of this magnitude," Stonner said. "We are the only state in this country that has it, and it doesn't cost the taxpayers anything."

Every county in Missouri has access to the Emergency Communications System.

Maryville man gives back to community, urges others to give

LONELLE R. RATHJE
City News Editor

He is a man with a mission — a mission of giving all he can back to the Maryville community.

Afton Schmitt, of Maryville, is the Northwest Missourian's September volunteer of the month.

"Regardless of the community, there is always a need to give back to the community," Schmitt said. "There's always plenty to do out there and there's always a place to get involved."

Because of his work around the community, Schmitt was nominated by Nancy Baxter, the University's Center for Applied Research grants director and board of directors' secretary for the Health Emergency Lifeline program.

For the last six years, Baxter said Schmitt has volunteered his time for the Lifeline program — a program that allows for the monitoring of home-bound senior citizens.

Not only does Schmitt handle the equipment installation and service calls for each unit in the Lifeline program, but he also serves as the program's board president.

"It provides a badly needed service," Schmitt said. "Our program utilizes equipment to permit people to remain in their own homes."

Despite the lack of recognition for his work, Baxter said Schmitt is still tireless in his dedication to causes.

"He is kind of like an unsung hero as far as we are concerned," she said. "He feels very strongly about making it possible for senior citizens to stay in their homes."

Schmitt, a Maryville resident since 1965, said he enjoys volunteering in a positive community.

Afton Schmitt,
Maryville Volunteer

"The Maryville community is a very positive, forward-thinking community," Schmitt said. "The community doesn't rest on past laurels. It likes to keep updated."

As president of the Lifeline board and the Kiwanis Club, he represents both groups at the Maryville Citizens for Community Action meetings.

He has been a Red Cross volunteer since 1980, and he serves on the Red Cross' Disaster Services Committee.

He retired in 1982 from the Missouri Highway and Roads Department.

For his volunteering efforts, Schmitt will receive a certificate from the Northwest Missourian.

Access 2000 helps plan futures

Program to educate high school students on career searching

ANDREA FRIEDMAN
Missourian Staff

High school students in northwest Missouri will soon receive assistance in planning their future careers through a program called Access 2000.

The program, sponsored by the Northwest Missouri Regional Council of Governments, is designed to help students identify opportunities available to them after high school.

"It's basically a program that helps students at northwest Missouri plan their careers," program coordinator Brenda Hardy said. "It provides students with a service as they plan."

Access 2000 will have a workshop from 8:30 a.m. to 2:40 p.m. Oct. 5 in the University Conference Center. High school guidance counselors will select two juniors and two seniors from their school to attend the workshop.

The students will divide into small groups and create their own businesses. They will design posters and tape a radio commercial to advertise their companies and products.

Dave Lankford, vice president of the Missouri Chamber of Commerce in Jefferson City, will be the workshop's facilitator and will speak on the free-enterprise system. Mark McKee, president of Pyramid Pizza in Kansas City, will give a speech about Entrepreneurship.

Hardy is currently in the process of visiting each high school in the eight-county area that is served by NMRCG to introduce the program to juniors and seniors. A handbook created by the NMRCG titled "Where Do You Fit In?" will be distributed as a resource for the students. Hardy said the handbook identifies the growing occupations in northwest Missouri and contains interviews she did with people in different occupations. The handbook offers students advice and suggestions as well as self-evaluation activities.

The NMRCG offers many services to the northwest Missouri region, including economic development, job training, recreation and education.

"It makes girls get involved more when girls participate," Kinder said, "It gets the entire school pumped up."

At the end of the day on Friday, the traditional pep assembly takes place. Class events such as the bat spin, three-legged race, tug of war, the pop chug and the thunderous battle cry take place.

The Golden Green Sixteen Pompon squad and cheerleading team also put on a brief music routine.

The pep assembly would not be complete without a pep talk from head football coach Chuck Lliteras.

"(The pep assembly) brings out the spirit in everyone," Kari Jacoby said. "It gets everyone pumped up for the big game."

The Friday finale begins at 6:45 p.m. on the MHS track with the courting of homecoming royalty and the crowning of Mr. and Ms. MHS.

The Spoofhound Football team (2-2) battle MEC rival Lafayette (1-2) at 7:30 p.m. on the 'Hounds home turf.

Agricultural method focuses on resources

"The goal is not necessarily to cut back on chemical use. It is to target the pests to get the best control."

High tech innovations are rapidly changing the way farmers grow crops, and some local experts believe the technology may be useful in northwest Missouri.

Precision farming, a management practice that concentrates on controlling the resources used in producing agriculture, focuses on using exact amounts of farm chemicals.

Dave Schieber, fertilizer and chemical branch manager of Maryville Co-op, described how his company uses precision farming by scouting customers' fields to determine what types of pests are problems for each farmer.

"The goal is not necessarily to cut back on chemical use," Schieber said. "It is to target the pests to get the best control."

Schieber reported that they have seen much better weed control in those fields where they have implemented the program.

George Gille, University agriculture professor, said the two main reasons farmers are adopting precision agriculture methods are because of environmental concerns and efforts to increase profits.

One method that may accomplish both goals is known as the Global Positioning System, which uses military satellites to locate a piece of equipment within a field. Combining extensive soil sampling and field scouting, chemical requirements for each area can be determined.

After the preliminary data is collected, fertilizer and pesticides can be applied in variable rates to ensure that only the amount required is applied.

As intriguing as this system sounds, it may be some time before it becomes useful in Nodaway County.

"If GPS is done the way it ought to be, it will be five years before we see any variable rate machines in the field," Schieber said.

Five years may be a long time to wait to take care of the environment, however.

At the University research farm, an experiment is underway to determine how farm chemicals affect run-off water.

Early results from samples taken from a creek on the farm have detected nitrates and evidence of atrazine and cyanazine, two chemicals already under study. However, he said there are no health risks.

Mahlon Fairchild, adjunct professor of agriculture, stressed the fact that even though there is no health risk associated with chemical use on the University farm, the research may be very useful.

"As a model farm, we will try to show that although it may be more expensive, it is possible to produce without these types of chemicals," Fairchild said.

Gille explained that profitability and the environment may conflict with one another.

"To eliminate run-off, a farmer may have to use something that is more expensive, but it may still be considered cost effective," Gille said.

St. Francis boasts quality visit

SUSAN LORIMOR
CHIEF REPORTER

Once again, the Missouri Foundation of Excellence has visited Maryville and this time its quest for quality led to St. Francis Hospital, where hospital administrators will learn the results of the September site visit in October.

The visit may qualify the hospital for a Missouri Quality Award. However, hospital administrator Ray Brazier said winning the award was not one of the main goals of St. Francis. Instead, he told hospital personnel they were winners regardless — that simply being selected for the site visit made them winners.

"The icing on the cake would be the award, but the cake (the visit) is pretty satisfying itself," Brazier said.

Julie Millard, director of community relations, said only two hospitals in Missouri were granted a site visit.

Examiners from the quality team looked at seven areas within the hospital — leadership, information and data analysis, strategic planning, human resource development, process management, operational results and customer focus and satisfaction.

"The visit will help us to understand what processes need to be refined," Brazier said. "It will help us to better understand how to meet community needs."

However, improvement was something the hospital had already been working on.

Perhaps it paid off because after the application was made, the hospital received the site visit. Brazier called the visit a compliment.

"It was recognition for doing good things," he said. "It indicated we were willing to go beyond the status quo to strive to be better."

Burnin' rubber. Kirby Affert, Wayne Taylor and Earl Baker discuss their motorcycles. Teachers, business people, nurses and secretaries comprise the groups

Bikers say no to helmet law

The classes are not the only thing the group does. Pitzenberger said FOR joins with the 102 Riders on occasion, and in November the group plans to sponsor a toy run in conjunction with the 102 Riders.

"A lot of times, during the summer, we do an eat-and-ride where the group will head out on the road and stop to eat somewhere," Pitzenberger said. "We also go on poker runs where we'll play cards, give away prizes and ride somewhere."

Another subject the group deals with is helmet laws concerning motorcyclists. Pitzenberger said Missouri just passed a new law that states if a cyclist receives a ticket for not wearing a helmet, the cyclist will now receive a misdemeanor instead of a class C felony.

Pitzenberger said she would prefer to ride her motorcycle without a helmet, and she believes that decision should be left up to the person.

Wayne Taylor, FOR member and owner of Taylor Construction, advises new riders to purchase gloves but said any kind of bike will do for those interested in riding with FOR.

Taylor used to ride several miles and has participated in many of the poker runs.

"We've ridden about 15,000 miles, and we always have a contest to see who can ride the most miles by the end of the year," Taylor said.

Taylor and Sandy Jones, an FOR member whose husband encouraged her to start riding, said the cost of motorcycling can add up.

"It's just like any other sport," Jones said. "For instance, if you're going to go skiing, you need equipment to do that. It's the same with riding. You need certain equipment."

Although everyone in the group rides motorcycles, FOR members vary in their occupations. Pitzenberger said teachers, nurses, businessmen and secretaries as well as others round out the group, and ages in the group range from those in their early 20s to those in their 70s.

Pitzenberger said the group is open to anyone who wants to have fun. She thinks many people who take up motorcycle riding began because they find it relaxing.

"I don't know how to explain it," Pitzenberger said. "It's a freedom thing. It's not where you're going; it's the journey itself."

Jerry Watkins, member of 102 Riders for about 12 years, described his feelings about riding as a distraction from everyday stress.

"It's just being out there, enjoying riding," Watkins said. "You get out there and you don't think about other things."

Watkins' interest in motorcycles started many years ago and his current bike, a Honda Goldwing, has been with him since 1987.

Like the FOR, Watkins said 102 Riders are involved in other activities beside riding.

He said the group sometimes donates to charities, and last year, they participated in the Toys For Tots program.

Watkins said he would like to see 102 Riders become more active, and like FOR, the group welcomes anyone who's interested in joining.

To those who are interested in joining a motorcycle organization, Watkins said newcomers should take it slowly at first.

"Start out on smaller motorcycles," Watkins said. "It takes time, and you've got to have patience. Because just when you think you know what you're doing, (the bike) shows you that you don't."

"It's a freedom thing. It's not where you're going; it's the journey itself."

MAC lifeguards garner excellent audit ratings

The Maryville Aquatic Center lifeguards achieved excellent ratings this summer from the facility audits conducted by Ellis and Associates.

Three unannounced audits were conducted throughout the season to evaluate the lifeguards in their job performance.

The lifeguards at the aquatic center averaged a score of 98 percent for the three audits.

Five individuals received a perfect score on their evaluations: Dana Rybolt, Chrissy Eimers, Kristy Sweeney, Amy Townsend and Ryan Powell.

The audit includes a secretly taped video of lifeguards at their stations throughout the facility. After the auditor announces his or her presence, the guards perform victim rescues. The third phase of the audit is used to evaluate CPR skills. All phases of the audit are videotaped.

Lifeguards at the MAC have earned the "Gold Elite" Award from Ellis and Associates in two of the past three years. Lifeguards must average a score of 96-100 percent on all the audits to receive this honor.

Sewage problem upsets residents

City officials discover below standard sewer, expand line system

SUSIE MIREs
MISSOURIAN STAFF

Expanding the city sewer system has left some Maryville residents with an unfavorable impression of city government.

City manager David Angerer explained that about a year ago the city became aware that an estimated five homes on East 14th Street were using septic tanks instead of using the city's sewer system.

Angerer said the quality of the sewage being emitted by the septic tanks did not meet state standards. The sewer line will be extended to the houses sometime this fall.

In order to deal with the residents' concerns, the city scheduled a series of meetings with homeowners beginning last fall.

"We told the residents about the problem and that it had to be resolved," Angerer said.

Yet at the initial meeting city officials and residents got off to a bad start.

"We didn't feel we had a very good first impression (of the city)," John Byland, a 14th Street resident, said.

Other residents agreed, commenting that they were made to feel like criminals and were warned repeatedly by city officials that they could be taken to court.

Some homeowners were hesitant to discuss the situation.

"I have no comment right now," resident Stephanie Collins said.

Another resident said that after the initial meeting, city officials realized they had approached the situation too harshly and began to amend their ways.

Angerer said the city will pay for the cost up front and residents will then make payments to the city.

Byland said that he will have to pay $4,500 over a 10-year period for the hook up.

However, some homeowners do not think that the situation has necessarily been resolved. In some ways, they believe they have been forced to accept, and pay for, a solution in which they had no choice.

City officials, however, are comfortable with the situation.

"As far as city problems go, this one was pretty small," Angerer said. "We saw a problem that needed to be resolved, and we took care of it."

At least one resident involved believed that others could learn from the experience.

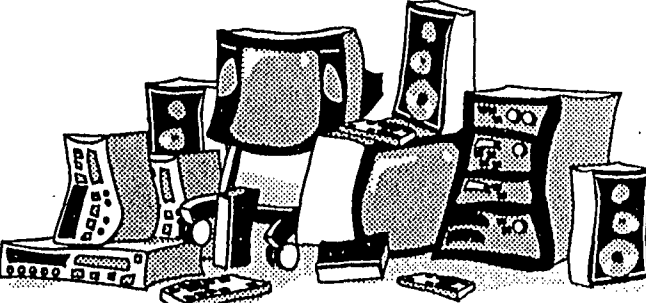

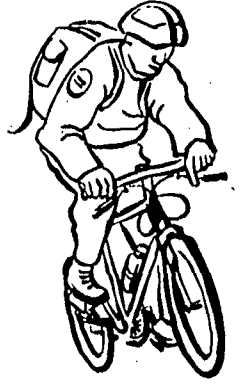

"The individual has to educate themselves about what's going on," Byland said. "I've been trying to educate myself so (the situation) won't happen again."

We would like to thank community members who offer compliments and advice to the Northwest Missourian.

Volleyball team hopes to stop slump tonight

ROB J. BROWN
MISSOURIAN STAFF

The Spoofhound volleyball squad has run into a rut in the middle of the season as it has currently lost three out of the last four matches.

The 'Hounds hope to strike back into the win column tonight in a home match against the Chillicothe Hornets at 5 p.m. in the MHS gymnasium.

The Spoofhounds scored their latest victory against Midland Empire Conference foe Lafayette High School.

The 'Hounds won in two straight games against the Irish to notch a match win.

Another MEC team, Benton High School, was up next for Maryville. The Benton Cardinals came in with a strong volleyball tradition. The Cardinals stretched their MEC undefeated streak to 17 games.

"(The loss) was a little deceiving," head coach Terri Clement said. "Benton played very well."

Maryville lost in two straight games each 8-15. The Spoofhounds were forced into a new lineup for the match.

"We weren't in original lineup," Clement said. "That forced (the girls) to communicate in different aspects."

Junior Jessica Coulter led the team with nine service points, including three aces. Senior Necama Beason led in kills with three.

Wednesday the 'Hounds battled a disciplined West Nodaway High School squad. In the previous match-up in the season, the Rockets were the victors in a tough three game match. Maryville needed to step up its performance to steal a win from the Rockets.

"They are very aggressive," Clement said. "We have to make sure we hit and get the ball up and not to give up."

The Spoofhounds dropped to West Nodaway in straight games, 5-15 and 11-15.

The 'Hounds struggled to pull all of their talents together to attain the victory.

"It was not pretty," Clement said.

Sophomore Cynthia Prokes headed up the 'Hound attack with six service points, while Coulter trailed with five including two aces. Junior Valerie Stiens scored five kills.

"We need to keep focused," Prokes said. "We know what to do, we have the ability, we need to put it together."

In order to break this losing streak, Clement said her team needs to come out swinging early in the game.

"If we can get on top early, we can get a big physiological advantage," Clement said.

The next few games will be crucial for the Spoofhounds, Prokes said.

"We really need to win the next one to stay in the race for conference (title)," Prokes said.

Up and over. Senior setter Dana Walter sends a ball over the net against Benton. The 'Hounds will play host to Chillicothe at 5:30 p.m. tonight.

'Cats football quietly offers exciting action

NATE OLSON

Catch the Bearcats or you will be missing out.

I would like to let you fine Maryville sports fans in on the best-kept secret in Maryville. The Northwest football team has quietly won its second straight game in a row after breaking a 17-game losing streak.

The 'Cats sit atop the MIAA Conference standings at 2-0. They own an overall record of 2-2. Northwest could easily be 3-1 if it had not been for a last second touchdown that was scored against them by South Dakota State University.

The entire attitude of the team is 100 percent more positive than last year. When the 'Cats take the field, they no longer think to themselves. "We just want to survive this game." Now they charge on to the field and think, "We have a shot of winning this game."

This attitude is evident in the Bearcats' play so far this season.

Junior quarterback Greg Teale, a Maryville native, is tops in the MIAA in passing with 764 yards and 10 touchdowns. Sophomore Wade Hanson and junior Jason Melnick are eighth and 10th in receptions in the conference.

The defense is also vastly improved. The 'Cats have only given up 27 points so far in their two MIAA Conference games. Junior defensive back Gary Knight and sophomore linebacker Kevin Singletary are second in the league in interceptions with two.

One stat that has helped Northwest win and be more exciting to watch is their turnover ratio. They are plus 2.25, and they lead the MIAA in that category. That means they cause more turnovers than they give up. The defense has seven interceptions in seven games while the offense has only been intercepted once.

These statistics give you somewhat of an idea of just how much the Bearcats have improved. However, do not take my word for it. Come see for yourself. For the two years I have been here, I have yet to see a crowd at Rickenbrode Stadium that even came close to filling it to capacity.

I encourage everyone to come to Rickenbrode Stadium 1:30 p.m. Saturday when the 'Cats square off against Central Missouri State University.

The game is the marquis event of the annual parents' weekend so the turnout should be good. I encourage you to take your Saturday afternoon to help fill up Rickenbrode Stadium and watch some exciting football and hopefully watch the Bearcats win their third game in a row.

I have been impressed with fan support from the Maryville community at Bearcat basketball games. The basketball team has had much success over the last couple of years and it looks as though Mel Tjeerdma, head football coach, and his team are on the brink of some success of their own.

So come on out residents of Maryville, this is your school and your athletic teams, too.

Otte leads harriers at Lafayette meet

The Maryville varsity girls cross country team continued their successful season with a third place team finish and an individual win at the Lafayette Invitational at Krug Park.

Senior Stacey Otte earned a gold medal with her first place finish and a clocking of 21 minutes 41 seconds over the 3.1-mile course Tuesday night.

Junior Courtney Conley took in a time of 23:51 and finished 11th for the Spoofhounds.

The girls finished with 94 team points, which placed them third in the overall team race.

Ron Eckerson, head cross country coach, said the team was shooting for a top two finish but missed it by eight points.

Varsity boys ran in the Lafayette Invite as well but could only garner a sixth place team finish.

Senior Brian Jewell was the fastest 'Hound on the night with a time of 18:03 and a 10th place finish.

Eckerson said this meet should prepare the team for the postseason.

"We will see a lot of these schools at the districts in the end of October," he said. "We got a good look at the competition."

The cross country team had a rough meet last Saturday as one of the smallest schools competing.

The Spoofhounds sent only Otte and Jewell to the competition. Otte finished in 22:04, finishing 18th.

The 'Hound runners will be in Shenandoah, Iowa, at 5 p.m. on Thursday.

Tennis team loses to Savannah, 7-2

The Maryville tennis team ran into stiff competition Monday when it lost to Savannah, 7-2.

Maryville could manage only one win in the singles and another victory in the doubles.

Head coach P.K. Krokstrom said he was happy with the play of junior Allison Jonnigan, who made a comeback and won her match, 8-6.

The only other win for the Spoofhounds came in doubles with the team of junior Shannon Longnecker and junior Nicole McGinness. This duo was down 3-1 before coming back and winning 8-6.

Senior Leone Trump also played a good match but fell in a tiebreaker (9-7). Krokstrom said.

Krokstrom said Savannah is one of the top teams the 'Hounds will play in the postseason.

Golf team extends winning ways

ROB J. BROWN
MISSOURIAN STAFF

The Maryville golf team is hovering above all competition. The Spoofhounds own an undefeated record and seem to have everything going for them.

Maryville (7-0) takes on the Savannah Savages tonight at Mozingo Golf Course in conference play.

The 'Hounds faced the Tarkio Indians last Thursday in match competition. Maryville handily disposed of the Indians with a 199-226 victory.

"We did really awesome," Garrett said. "It seemed that I couldn't do anything wrong, the whole team did really good."

Monday the Spoofhounds were in action at the Albany Tournament. It was a two-person best ball tournament which Maryville entered with three teams.

Anderson and Riggs took fifth place, with a score of 88, among the 25 teams.

Momentum, big plays make difference in football game

CHRIS GEINOSKY
MISSOURIAN STAFF

The Maryville Spoofhound football team could not establish any momentum last Friday night in a 28-15 loss at St. Pius High School.

Neither team could take control of the game, but the big plays made the difference.

"Momentum will either help you or kill you in a game," Chuck Lliteras, head football coach, said. "(St. Pius) had three big plays over the top. We let down for just an instant, and that was the ball game."

Maryville could not establish anything the rest of the game, but execution was a major factor in the loss.

"We're not performing as well as we should, and we continually shot ourselves in the foot," Lliteras said. "We got impatient, and we put ourselves in third and long (yardage) a lot."

At the same time, St. Pius put together the big plays they needed to wrap up the victory.

One bright spot for Maryville came on the final drive of the game when sophomore safety/quarterback John Otte directed a 78-yard touchdown drive.

Lliteras said his team is making "young team mistakes" and it must mature quickly.

Maryville will play Lafayette Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Maryville's Homecoming game at the football stadium.

"We have to look at this game as a challenge," Lliteras said. "We have to forget those games in the past. We have a new opponent this week, and I know the Hounds will work hard."

Lafayette has a roster dominated with senior athletes and could make a big impact on the Midland Empire Conference this year.

The Irish run out of the wishbone when they have the ball on offense and often show a pro-like 4-3 defensive front, Lliteras said.

Lliteras said the Irish's offense rides the strength of senior runningbacks B.J. Lafave and Craig Dydell.

"It's not going to get any easier," Lliteras said. "Lafayette is as talented across the board as anyone we've seen so far."

Lafayette head football coach Paul Compton said Dydell has been on the sidelines the last two weeks but his team will need to run the ball well to win the game.

"Dydell's been hurt the last couple weeks, but I expect him to play this week," Compton said. "We are a predominant running team, and we'll have to run the ball if we want to win."

Lafayette will be riding high fresh off of a convincing win over J. C. Harmon, 36-6.

"If we play like we did Friday, we won't have a chance this week," Lliteras said. "We need to get it turned around right now."

MITCH BAYSINGER/Missourian Staff

Move those feet. Spoofhound football players work on their footwork in practice this week. The 'Hounds have been working hard all this week for their big Homecoming game against Lafayette Friday night. The game will be the 'Hounds' first MEC game.

Environment demands respect

How would Northwest rate with David Orr? Would anybody care? And David who? Not David Letterman? Would you spell that last name please?

Well, his article "What is Education For?" made me think. Like, about stuff I don't usually notice on a typical day on planet Earth. I don't think about the rainforest that disappears an acre per second or the 72 square miles of new desert.

This is not the work of ignorant people, he said, but the result of work by people with letters behind their names. He recalls that the best-educated nation on earth of 55 years ago designed and perpetuated the Holocaust — not a reassuring thought.

In David Orr's thinking, knowing more does not necessarily make better people. Mastery of subject matter is OK with him, but he says we need to go further, to come to self-knowledge, and knowledge of how various technologies and business practices affect real people, their homes, communities and home planet.

One suggestion he makes is that faculty and students should study the "wells, mines, farms, feedlots and forests that supply the campus as well as the dumps where you send your waste."

The idea would be to shift the institution's buying power to support better alternatives.

All those things don't happen at Northwest in a systematic way, but what's there is not shabby. For one thing, there's an outstanding advocate for character education on the faculty — Jean Bouas. I hope you get to know her and what she stands for. And Bob Bush, vice president in the center of Applied Research, promotes grass-roots development.

There's a power system that relies a lot on renewable fuel from those giant piles of wood chips in John Redden's keeping. Also, the pellets-from-paper fuel gives Maryville an unusual opportunity for recycling.

Due in large part to Joanne Fairchild's work, the campus has an arboretum second to none. Try one of the tree walks to clear your head from studying or just to nourish peace in your soul.

The old railroad right-of-way along the north edge of the main campus will soon function as a trail, and someday connect Blanchard and Council Bluffs. Richard Landes, Jerry Wilmes, Dale Midland (emeritus) and others have been movers and shakers in this project.

Add curricular attention to "basic principles of ecology, how to live well in a place, limits of technology, sustainable agriculture and forestry, steady-state economics, environmental ethics," and David What's-His-Name would find Northwest contributing even more to saving the earth. Believe it Orr not.

It's all a spiritual concern, because respect for God means respect for God's creation. Implementing David Orr's ideas would help us move closer to that goal.

The Rev. Larry Lewis is the pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.
